Q: Is there a way to create a user log for cron jobs? I have a number of cron jobs that, if ran at certain times, will create logs to a certain file. Is there a way to have this cron job use an existing user instead of creating a new one? I'm on a shared server, so I'm not sure if any of the server specifications will allow me to create new users, but I think I could create a new group and add all of my cron jobs to that. A: You can use the crontab -u command to change the userid or crontab -e to edit the crontab file. A: Yes, you could just add the jobs to the user's crontab file by editing the crontab file that is given to you by your server administrator. (no-undef) } A: The variables module is dedicated to this. It defines special types for dealing with return values, and its functions allow the programmer to specify which type to return.
