Desktop Alarm Clock Widget is a simple application built on the Adobe AIR platform, that provides a simple alarm function for your desktop. It is easy to work with it, as it packs limited features. The interface of the tool is represented by a simple window with no extraordinary elements from the visual perspective. But we must also take into account the fact that Desktop Alarm Clock Widget has not been updated for a very long time. The "what you see is what you get" concept clearly applies to the tool, as there are no other options available, aside from the ones visible in the main frame. An analog clock is displayed here, which is synchronized with the local system time. You can write the hour and minute or select them using two arrow buttons, write a message, and set the alarm with the simple click of a button. Unfortunately, Desktop Alarm Clock Widget doesn't provide a countdown timer as well. We have tested this app on older and newer OS platforms alike, thinking that we have encountered some compatibility issues.
